FEDERAL WOMAN'S

Ann Z. Caracristi

*Senior Intelligence Research Analyst
Chief of Office
National Security Agency
Fort George G. Meade, Maryland*

In recognition of her exceptional contributions to the intelligence effort of the United States over a period of twenty years.

Directing complex research and analysis in the fields of mathematics and languages as applied to cryptology, she has pioneered in the application of computer techniques and has excelled in both the technical and administrative aspects of the work. She has shown outstanding competence in the development and professional management of multi-million-dollar research programs which have produced intelligence data of vital importance to the United States.

AWARDS FOR 1965

Dr. Elizabeth B. Drewry
*Director, Franklin D. Roosevelt
Library
National Archives and Records Service
General Services Administration
Hyde Park, New York*

In recognition of her outstanding scholarly and administrative achievements in directing the organization and preservation of historical documents of great value to the Nation.

To the unprecedented tasks of Government-wide records management she brought exceptional qualities of tact and persuasiveness and a comprehensive knowledge of archival values. She has increased the scope of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library and has rendered extraordinary service to the Government and the world of scholarship. Her 27-year career has brought her recognition as one of the foremost women archivists in the world.

FEDERAL WOMAN'S

Dorothy Morrow Gilford

*Director, Mathematical Sciences Division
Office of Naval Research
Department of the Navy
Washington, D. C.*

In recognition of her highly creative direction of scientific research programs of major importance to the national defense.

A pioneer in making fuller use of international scientific resources, she directs a contract research program that exceeds 18 million dollars. Her remarkable foresight in initiating research has resulted in major contributions to the Polaris program and to reliability of electronic equipment throughout the Navy. She has also initiated novel programs to encourage young scientists — especially young women — to enter challenging fields of research.

AWARDS FOR 1965

Carol C. Laise
*Deputy Director
Office of South Asian Affairs
Department of State
Washington, D. C.*

In recognition of her outstanding achievements as a Foreign Service Officer in South Asia and her exceptional service to American diplomacy in international organizations.

Her service in India has been marked by extraordinary success in winning the friendship, confidence, and respect of persons in all levels of their society, enabling her to present this Government's point of view and to evaluate foreign attitudes with exceptional skill and effectiveness. Her depth of knowledge, sincerity, and superior diplomatic talent have contributed greatly to the advancement of United States foreign policy objectives.

Dr. Sarah E. Stewart

*Head, Human Virus Studies Section
National Cancer Institute
National Institutes of Health
Public Health Service
Department of Health, Education and Welfare
Bethesda, Maryland*

In recognition of her brilliant accomplishments and discoveries in virology which have changed the course of cancer virus research.

She achieved a major breakthrough with her discovery of a new type of virus in mice which can induce cancers in related species as well as its natural host. Her further discoveries relating to the capacity of certain virus strains to jump species barriers have increased the possibility of testing human cancer viruses in lower animals. Her work has received world-wide attention and has stimulated the efforts of virologists in studying the cancer problem.

AWARDS FOR 1965

Dr. Penelope Hartland Thunberg
*Deputy Chief, International Division
Office of Research and Reports
Central Intelligence Agency

In recognition of her outstanding effectiveness in directing international economics research of great significance to the national security.

Through her broad knowledge of international trade and finance and her impressive ability to organize and direct a complex research activity, she has made major contributions to analysis of the extremely critical field of Soviet Bloc international economic activities, providing intelligence which serves as a basis for policy decisions of the United States Government. Her research and writing have earned her a national reputation in the field of international economics.
